"A friend of mine got me to take the Tanlac treatment, and now I eat good, digest my food perfectly, sleep sound at night, and feel fine in every way. I am glad to recommend Tanlac on the strength of what it has done for me."

Connellsville Independents Break Even With Homestead Grays; Locals Win in First

Cokers Take Morning Clash,
7-5; Badly Beaten in
Afternoon, 18-5.

MUCH HITTING FEATURES

Maying two games with the Homestead Grays yesterday, the Connellsville Independents broke even, winning the initial contest in the morning, the second game in the afternoon going to the visitors by a big margin. The morning score was 7-5, and the result of the afternoon's entertainment was 18-5. Fans were treated to lots of hits, in fact sufficient to win several ball games.

Johnson, the big catcher of the visitors, had a liking for sending balls over the right field fence, getting two home runs in that manner in the afternoon game.

Helmeick of Homestead pitched the forenoon game for the Cokers. He aided in the victory by a home run over the left field fence. McKinley hit a three-bagger in the same game. There was quite a difference in the time of the two games. The morning clash required only one hour and 50 minutes, while the teams battled for two hours and 44 minutes in the afternoon. Kozar was nipped for eight hits in one and two-third innings and Butts of Owensville relieved him. He lasted two and one-third innings and then Patterson finished the game. He held the Grays scoreless through the sixth, seventh and eighth frames and allowed only a single tally in the ninth. In the meantime the Cokers were battling all the way and managed to score eight runs, ordinarily enough to cap any ball game.

ANDY KOZAR FORCED TO QUIT FIRST TIME AS A COKER PITCHER

When Andy Kozar was knocked off the Coker mound in the second inning of yesterday afternoon's game it was the first time he had ever been forced out of a game in all the pitching he has done under the Connellsville colors. No one was sorer than Andy, but his arm was in bad condition and everytime he lifted his shoulder he suffered excruciating pain. Because he was showered with hits fans were at first inclined to be critical but after-though and memories of some hot games he has won soon prevailed and only sympathy was felt for him. Kozar has been a good loyal worker for Connellsville and his teammates, who knew of his arm trouble, could not criticize. Andy suffered with his arm at the close of the season last year but rather thought the pain might leave him this season. It recurred yesterday and he was forced to quit.

Of Interest to Fans.

The Pittsburgh Pirates added two more to their victory side yesterday at the expense of the Chicago Cubs while the New York Giants only managed to break even with the Brooklyn Dodgers. The Pirates won 6-4 in the morning, scoring the quintet of runs in the opening frame. In the afternoon the score was 10-2.

The Giants lost the morning game, 5-2, and won in the second clash, 9-6.

The rush of the Philadelphia Athletics to the top of the American League was halted yesterday when the club lost two games to Boston, 6-5 and 4-2.

"Rube" Ruth made two home runs yesterday, bringing his total this season to 11.

Helmeick, who pitched the morning game for the Cokers, had a chance to go with Boston this season but he didn't desire to step into fast company. Helmeick will likely be on hand next Saturday.

"Regulars" who attend every Coker game, could easily see that Andy Kozar was suffering pain while he pitched. "Andy" can deliver when he is in shape as has been testified by performances in which he has worked himself out of more than one hole.

"Chip" Francis got into the game in the afternoon, taking the place of Bretch, who went to second after Patterson had supplanted Butts on the mound.

"The best crowds we ever had" was the expression of Manager Thompson of the locals. His estimate for the afternoon was 1,400.

Big colored delegations attended the games to root for the Grays.

"We made for the crags and built a cabin. I came down that day Gene sent his horse M. to you. Never saw Gene so broken-hearted. Well, after he sloped for the border Bonita and I were hard put to it to keep alive. But we got along all right for me. Once I went to El Cajon and ran across into Gene. He was back from the revolution and cutting up some. Day I got away from him after doing all I could to drag him out of town. A long time after that Gene trailed up to the crags and found us. Gene had stopped drinking, he'd changed wonderfully, was fine and dandy. It was then he began to pester the life out of me to make me marry Bonita. I was haggard, so was she, and I was some scared of Bonita. I had to give in, and I asked Bonita to marry me. Well, she wouldn't at first—said she wasn't good enough for me. But I saw the marriage idea was working deep, and I just kept on being as decent as I knew how. So it was my wedding to marry Bonita—my best friend to marry her—she made her grow soft and sweet and pretty as a mountain quail. Gene fetched up Padre Marcos, and he married us."

A ONE-ACT PLAY WITH A MORAL

(Frequently seen in homes on the Avenue and in the city)

MRS. CRANE: My dear, how well you're looking—and how young you seem. However do you do it?

MRS. WORTH: I didn't do it, Grace—nature did it for me.

MRS. CRANE: Now you know you're as old as I am! What treatment do you take to keep your skin so silky and soft?

MRS. WORTH: If I did one artificial thing, I'm sure I wouldn't tell you—but I only take the best of care of the skin that's given me. Beauty is only skin deep—but one has to get under the skin to bring it out and preserve it. The secret's there in the window behind you—pure, refreshing, wholesome.

Danny paused in his narrative, breathing hard, as if the memory of the incident described had stirred strong and thrilling feeling in him. Stillwell's smile was rapturous. Madeline leaned toward Danny with her eyes shining.

"Miss Hammond, an' you, Bill Stillwell, now listen, for this is strange. I've got to tell you. The afternoon Bonita and I were married, when Gene and the lady had gone, she left me for a little, and when she came back she wore some pretty yellow flowers in her hair. She said some queer things about spooks and rocks down the canyon. Then she said she wanted to show me where she always sat and waited an' watched for me when I was away. She led me around under the crags to a long slope. It was some pretty then—clear an' open, with a long sweep, an' the desert canyon deep an' red. There were yellow flowers on that slope, the same kind she had in her hair.

"When I heard the strange crack of rollin' rocks—heard them rattle down an' roll an' grow faint—I was some out of my head. But not for long. Then rocks were rollin' an' right, only it was the whisper of the wind."

"An' there under the crags was a gold pocket. "Then I was worse than I ever. I went gold-drazy. I worked like seven teen burros. Bill, I dug a lot of gold beca' quartz. Bonita watched the trails for me, brought me water. That was how she come to get caught by Pat Hove an' his desperados. Sure! Pat Hove was an expert on old-time dirt that he mixed up with Don Carlos. Bonita will tell you some sugarcoated news about that outfit. Just now my story is all gold."

Danny Males got up and kicked back his chair. Blue lightning flashed from his eyes as he thrust a hand toward Stillwell.

"Bill, old pal, put her there—give me your hand," he said. "You were always my friend. You had faith in me. Well, Danny Males owes you, an' he owes Gene Stewart a good deal, an' Danny Males pays. I want two partners to help me work my gold mine. You an' Gene. Go fetch him; an' right here in this house, with my wife an' Miss Hammond as witnesses, we'll draw up a partnership. Go find him, Bill. I want to show him this gold, show him how Danny Males pays! An' the only bitter deed in my life today is that I can't ever pay Monty Price."

Madeline watched the huge Stillwell and the little cowboy, both talking wildly, as they walked off arm in arm to find Stewart. She imagined something of what Danny's disappointment would be, of the elder man's consternation and grief, when he learned Stewart had left for the border. At this juncture she looked up to see a strange, yet familiar figure approaching. Padre Marcos!

Mention of Padre Marcos, sight of him, had always occasioned Madeline a little indefinable shock; and now, as he stepped to the porch, a shrunken, stooped, and sad-faced man, she was startled.

The padre bowed low to her. "Senora, will you grant me audi-ence? It is a matter of great moment which you might not care to have any one hear."

Wonderingly, Madeline inclined her head. The padre gently closed one door and then the others.

"Senora, I have come to disclose a secret—my own sinfulness in keeping it—and to implore your pardon. Do you remember that night Senor Stewart dragged me before you in the waiting-room at El Cajon?"

"Yes, replied Madeline. "Senora, since that night you have been Senor Stewart's wife."

Madeline became as motionless as stone. She seemed to feel nothing, only to hear.

"You are Senor Stewart's wife. I have kept the secret under fear of death. But I could keep it no longer. Senor Stewart may kill me now. Ah, Senora, it is very strange to you. You were so frightened that night, you knew not what happened. Senor Stewart threatened me. He forced you. He made me speak the service. And I, Senora, knowing the deeds of these sinful cowboys, fearing worse than disgrace to one so beautiful and so good as you, I could not do less than marry you truly. At least you should be his wife. So I married you, truly, in the service of my church."

"My God!" cried Madeline, rising. "How can I implore you, Senora, hear me out! Do not leave me. Do not look on—me. Ah, Senora, let me speak a word for Senor Stewart. He was drunk that night. He did not know what he was about. In the morning he came to me, made me swear by my cross that I would not reveal the disgrace he had put upon you. If I did he would kill me. Life is nothing to the American desperado. Senora, I promise to respect his command, but I did not tell him you were his wife. He did not dream I had truly married you. He went to fight for the freedom of my country—and I brooded over the sin of my secret. If he were killed I need never tell you. But if he lived I knew that I must some day."
